Ezekiel 33:21

*In the twelfth year of our exile...
a fugitive from Jerusalem
came to me and said,
“The city has been struck down.”*

Evangelical church leaders vow to reopen sanctuary doors early in Southern California

'Churches are ready to roll out, no matter what,' said one pastor. 'That said, we are not trying to be rebels or activists here'

Pastor Danny Carroll of Water of Life Community Church in Fontana speaks to members of the media at the church on Thursday, May 7, announcing that his and several other evangelical churches in the state plan to reopen for in-person services on May 31, which Christians observe as the Day of the Pentecost. ## Rebellion already underway

Some churches already have begun their rebellion against state- and county-issued orders. On Sunday May 3, the 412 Church in Murrieta resumed in-person services in defiance of state coronavirus-pandemic orders that permit parking-lot meetings where worshipers participate from cars, but not indoor gatherings.

A sister congregation in San Jacinto plans to follow suit on Sunday, May 10, all while following physical distancing guidelines, according to an attorney who represents both churches. A judge recently blocked Inland Empire churches from opening their doors to in-person

"You have churches in Santa Ana and Los Angeles feeding people and meeting... Pastor Jim Domen, founder of Newport Beach-based Church United, which he says represents more than 1,000 pastors in California. "How can Costco stay open but not the church?"

Pastor Matt Brown, founder of Sandals Church in Riverside, said during a May 7 news conference in Fontana that churches, which are being allowed to help those in need, should also be allowed to gather to pray. (Photo by Deepa Bharath, SCNG)
